CNS MEMBERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

The Center for Networked Systems (CNS), established in 2004, is a research group of   UC San Diego faculty/researchers and graduate students collaborating with companies interested in emerging challenges in networked systems platforms and environments. We are building, testing, measuring, and evaluating real systems for results that have a real impact.

If your company is interested in networking, data centers, measurement, security, and data analysis research and you would like to collaborate with CNS students, consider becoming a Sponsor level industry member of CNS.

Sponsor Membership: $100,000 +

Your membership supports research projects at CNS headed by CNS faculty and researchers and supporting the research training of CNS graduate students working on these projects.

CNS Sponsor Level membership benefits include the following:

Invitation for an unlimited number of your representatives to our yearly CNS Research Reviews located at UC San Diego and invitations to the CNS Lecture Series.

Assistance in developing deep technical and research relationships with faculty, graduate, and undergraduate students for sponsored and collaborative research, including jointly published research papers, open-source software releases, and other results.

Opportunities to promote your company and recruit students on campus. A direct connection to advertising your employment opportunities to CSE students who are working in systems and networking research.

Potential opportunities to send your representatives to be Visiting Scholars hosted at UC San Diego by CNS, based on mutual interest.

The annual visit of CNS researchers to your company to explore possible collaborations or host a collaboration visit at UC San Diego for your company.

Membership recognition on the CNS website, placement of logo on CNS marketing materials, and the inclusion of company literature at CNS Research Review registration table.
